Call of the Convention

You are cordially invited to attend the Twenty-Second National Foreign Trade Convention, to be held at Houston, Texas, on November 18, 19, 20, 1935.

THE signal success attending the Convention of last year in New York was due largely to the nature of the problems then before the country, and to the widespread interest evinced in discussion of these by speakers of recognized authority.

THIS year's Convention will offer similar opportunities of an exceptional nature to all who attend, of examining at closer range outstanding problems, national and international in character, which continue to present obstacles to the restoration of world trade to its former position as the open door to greater prosperity for all countries.

OUR chief concern today is that of freeing the channels of international trade from obstacles which continue to retard the economic movement of goods and services. We have reached the stage where national effort should be directed to the solving of our remaining problems in foreign trade, by seeking to translate into practice, at an early date, the sound monetary and commercial principles which by general accord, as reflected in the recommendations of the Congress of the International Chamber of Commerce, are accepted by all countries as indispensable to complete world recovery.

THE National Foreign Trade Convention, held last year in New York, went on record in support of early stabilization of international exchange and return to a definite and known monetary system as a first step towards recovery, supplemented by the balancing of national budgets. How to give effect to these requirements is a question which will engage the earnest consideration of the Convention at Houston, having regard to the weight given by other countries to United States initiative in this matter.

THE international character of the proceedings at our annual convention has again been emphasized by invitations extended to the representatives of foreign nations to participate in the deliberations of the Convention. It is confidently expected that prominent members of the Administration at Washington will speak on this occasion. Government departments also are taking active steps to be adequately represented by officials who are fully informed on all matters affecting trade with other countries, and who may be consulted by those seeking information or advice.

ATTENDANCE at the Convention of the Chairman and members of the American Economic Mission to the Far East will add greatly to the interest taken in sessions dealing with our trade in the Orient.

THE Convention will be informed of the steps being taken by the National Foreign Trade Council to organize similar Missions to Latin American countries, with the object of giving effect to the conclusions of the Montevideo Conference, in 1933, for the stimulation of trade between the Americas. The Latin-American Session promises to be one of leading importance, in view of the special problems to come before it. Invitations to the Presidents of these countries to send delegates to the Convention have met with a most favorable response. This session will include speakers from some of the Southern Republics.

EMERGING from a period of experimentation looking to domestic recovery from the dislocations in world commercial relationships, we now enter upon the task of adjusting our national economy to our needs, as a nation to whom international trade is indispensable to complete recovery and restored prosperity. Of timely importance, therefore, will be the Cotton and Tobacco sessions, which will seek to inform the country of the serious consequences to these leading export commodities of policies that lead to a decline in exports, and which are an incentive to the increased growth of cotton and tobacco in other countries, with reactions disturbing to our foreign trade in other products.

AS a national institution, the annual convention of the National Foreign Trade Council embraces all the elements that combine to give unity of purpose to our economic life—Agriculture, Industry and Commerce, Banking, Transportation, Insurance, Foreign trade organizations, both import and export, Government services, Chambers of Commerce, Boards of Trade, Education, etc. Here also delegates meet on international ground, with representatives from all the leading nations sharing in deliberations which have as a chief aim the re-establishment of commercial relations on a basis of closer friendship and cooperation.

James A. Fawell

Chairman.

EXPORT-IMPORT BANK HEADQUARTERS — The temporary headquarters of the Export-Import Bank of Washington, D. C., will be open at Houston at convenient intervals during the three days of the Convention. Mr. Charles E. Stuart, Executive Vice-President, and three other officials of the Bank will be in attendance at Houston to afford opportunity to foreign traders attending the Convention to confer with them.

Special Excursion to Mexico

ARRANGEMENTS are being made for a Post Convention Party from Houston to Mexico City at exceptionally low cost — approximately $105.00. This figure includes round-trip fare from Houston and lower berth as well as hotel room and meals during the five-day visit in Mexico, also trips to the Floating Gardens at Xochimilco, quaint Cuernavaca, the ancient Pyramids at San Juan Teotihuacán and the prominent city of Puebla. For further details, consult Mr. F. Alatorre, G. A., National Railways of Mexico, who will be present at the Convention.
