Dr. P. F. Greene of the Yale-in-China Hospital at Changsha, was prevented from returning to Changsha by the Chekiang-Kiangsi Railway by the Japanese occupation of Nanchang on Monday, March 27. He had been in Shanghai purchasing a large quantity of medical and hospital supplies and had reached Ningpo on the return journey when the Japanese military made its drive on Nanchang, resulting in the cutting of the railway. As a result Dr. Greene was compelled to return to Shanghai early this week in order to obtain further equipment for a motor caravan consisting of several trucks. According to present plans, Dr. Greene and his party intend to travel by way of Kihwa, Chekiang and thence over new motor roads through the mountains across Kiangsi a considerable distance south of the Japanese lines. Those who accompanied Dr. Greene included Dr. C. C. Talbott of the United Evangelical Mission at Changsha, two volunteer doctors, one American and the other a German-Jewish refugee, several Catholic priests and nuns, two foreign motor mechanics and several Chinese women nurses. Most of the medical supplies were contributed by the American Red Cross, China Medical Association and the British Lord Mayor's Fund. The route they planned to follow was more than 1000 miles.
