HE CURRENCY LOAN.

Japanese Undertaking.

Views of Mikado's Press.

The Chinese Government has applied to the Four Powers for a loan of 200,000,000 yen for currency reform, recently, says a Japanese newspaper to hand. It has been reported that the British, French and Russian Governments are not in a position to undertake the loan and if ever the loan is to be closed it will be undertaken solely by Japan. If in case America joins the Syndicate, it may be undertaken by the two nations.

If with the loan made by Japan, China s able to make a reform in her complicated and unsystematic currency system to one and unsystematic currency system to one of gold exchange or gold standards, it will be helping China to pull herself up into a better economic state. The results will not only be beneficial to Japan but to the other nations as well.

That China being a silver standard country and coupled with her un-uniform ystem, her inconvenience and loss are xceedingly significant. A certain business nan who has just returned from China nuotes the following incident. At a hotel ie had "paid 7 coolies in yen silvers as ayment for their services. In sharing he payment, even after the clapse of ours, no decision was met with so that he proprietor of the hotel, the guests he nd neighbouring peoples entered into the liscussion, changing the scene into a mall parliamentary body. Just for the division of a single payment such ime is consumed. One can imagine the loss incurred in settling the daily ransactions in business and trade. The one incident describes the state of affairs. As a result it may be inferred as showing why one meets difficulty n obtaining credit, one of the most afficatious means in modern business transetions. With foreign trade the changing price of gold and silver causes a large nargin of fluctuations in the exchange value of China. For this reason, export rade is put at a disadvantage and import rade oppressed, extending to the confusion if the Chinese financial circles causing such loss. Thus China has been meeting Plarge obtstacle in her ceonomic progress the to the defect in her currency system. Hence, if a reform can be realized in her surrency system, adopting the gold ex-hange or gold basis, the disadvantages of China will be swept away, for her money ystem will be placed on a stable basis imilar to the other first-rate Powers.

As in the present case the high price of silver has lowered the Chinese exchange alue, what was 70-80 taels before the War has now dropped to 30-40 taels. This sharp change has caused an unhealthy form of speculation in the financial conditions of China, bringing in a gloomy aspect. With he present state of affairs, it is only plain hat with the drop in the price of silver ed the bolster of the exchange the chinese financial world will again be narassed by confusion but Japan also ill be hurt on account of her large trade onexions with China. This adds to the regency of the currency reform in China. t is for this reason that many an econ-mist of the nation are desirous of sceing apan lend China the amount so that hina may realize her long contemplated lan;

This change was being considered dur-This change was being considered dur-ig the Ching Dynasty, not only desired y. China but by the Powers. Nearly very point has been considered and it emains only to apply the policy. It is seined, therefore, for Japan to loan the mount and aid China in the adoption of desystem but not without some conditions. e system but not without some con-

The first of them is that the unit of Chinese money should be unde equal to apanese currency. The denomination apanese currency. The denomination may be named Yuan or Tael as long as 2 "bu " gold, about 12.9 grains, is a Yen. This will do away with many an incon-This will do away with many an incon-venience in the exchange value of Chinese and Japanese drafts.

The second is that China should be purundresto deposit her specie reserve in the Bank of Japan, just as Japan deposits a portion of her specie in the Bank of Engand in London. This will put Japan in position to handle the foreign settlements A China but at the same time the greater part of the 200,000,000 loan will be kept in Japan so that no change will be caused in he holding of the money. If this is pos-ible, Japan will enter on the world market s the centre of the monoy market in the Car East.

If the above two points are to be realized then it will be one step forward in the soalled Sino-Japanese joint enterprise which will go to foster the amity between the two uations.
